From the Univerſal Spectator, Feb. 14. No. 384.

A Letter from a young Gentleman on his Travels, to his Father.

Paris, Dec. 11. A. D. 1735.

Honour'd and Worſhipful Sir,

THIS is to let you know that I am well in Health, hoping that you and my Mother and Brother Bob are the ſame. I got ſafe to Harwich and went aboard ſoon after: But as we we came over the Salt Sea, it rag'd like any mad, and made me ſick to Death: When I was a little recover'd, I had Recourſe to the Neat's Tongue which my loving Mother put into my Pocket, the laſt Thing ſhe did at parting, and it kept the Wind out of my Stomach, as ſhe ſaid it would.

We arriv'd at Holland on Thurſday, and as ſoon as my Things were aſhore I made our John put on his Livery: He looks very well in it and takes great Care of me, as Mother bid him: At the Hague we met with the Exciſeman who liv'd once in our Town, and he and I and our John drank a Bottle together: He is a mighty merry Sort of a Man, and ſings a Dutch Catch in a very elegant Taſte. And moreover than that, I met likewiſe with the Parſon's Son, who went away for the Baſtard Child; he ſells Snuff and perfum'd Waſh Balls at the Hague and at Rotterdam, and we crack'd a Bottle together too. I follows your laſt Advice punctually, and takes Care to keep none but the beſt of Company: Our John is never from me.

I makes Remarks on the Country, as you and our Curate adviſ'd me. Tho' I have ſeen ſeveral Counties in England, yet I never ſaw ſo many Rivers in any one of them as there are in Holland; however this I could not but obſerve, that we have larger Plains and a greater Number of Oaks and Timber growing than they have, and our John ſays the ſame. They tell me here that they have not one Biſhop thro' all the Seven Provinces: As for my Part I did not ſee ſo much as one Surplice in it; ſo that you may gueſs, Sir, whether theſe Folk be Chriſtians. I wiſh'd our Curate was among them to bring about a Reformation, and our John was of the ſame Mind.

Tho' ſo ſtrange was their Religion, if they had any at all, yet when we came into the Popiſh Countries we then met with Cathedrals again, many's the one, of which I was very glad, and ſo was John: But when I went into one of them I would not croſs myſelf with their Holy Water, as they call it, which was put up againſt a Pillar, nor would I pull off my Hat, becauſe it belong'd to the Papiſhes, and the Place as I have heard our Curate often ſay, was a Place of Idolatry. At laſt a great fat Parſon, (a Parſon I believe he was, tho' nothing like our Parſons in Norfolk, for he was without a Shirt or a Pair of Shoes, and had a great Rope about his Middle) be he what he will, this greazy Fellow came up to me, look'd grievous angry at me, and gabbled at me in an outlandiſh Lingo, as much as to ſay pull off your Hat; I was plaguily afraid, being in a ſtrange Place, ſo made no Words but pull'd it off. I was uneaſy in my Conſcience about this Affair, 'till I went to John, who entirely clear'd all Scruples, by remembring me of a Maxim he had often heard my Grandfather uſe, that when you are at Rome you muſt do as they do at Rome. You can't imagine how learned the People are in theſe Popiſh Countries, or which ſeem ſo at leaſt, for they all of them have their Common-Prayer Book in Latin; tho' they ſeem to ſay their Prayers at Church, as I us'd ſometimes to ſay my Repetition at School, without underſtanding a Syllable of it: For as I have a Spice of the Language, I talk'd to my Landlady and her two Daughters upon this Point, and found they only knew where the Prieſt was in his Prayers by a long String of Beads. I told them it was a burning Shame to be thus impos'd on, and would fain have had 'em turn'd to the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd. But I find they all here in foreign Parts neither regard the Law nor the Goſpel, and don't value our Church no more than nothing: Some are Papiſhes, ſome are a Sort of your Preſbyterians; ſo that except I meet with an Engliſhman and a Norfolk Man, I can hardly meet with a Chriſtian among 'em all.

I obſerv'd in my travelling to Paris that the common People wear a wooden Kind of Shoes, and was told by an Engliſh Gentleman that it was owing to paſſive Obedience and arbitrary Power; and that ſome Years ago there was a Scheme laid by ſome Lovers of French Faſhions to introduce this Cuſtom into England. I am glad it never took Place, for they ſeem too heavy for us Engliſhmen. I am ſure all the true Engliſh will always be againſt them, and the Norfolk Men more eſpecially, and our John is ſure of the ſame. I have heard our Curate preach up for paſſive Obedience, but, dear Father, whenever he does again, don't mind a Syllable he ſays.

Tho' I heard ſo much of the French Cookery, their Kickſhaws and Fricaſees, and their Ragous, yet I don't find they live near ſo well as we do in Norfolk: We excel 'em much in our Beef, which is ſuter than theirs by at leaſt an Inch in the Rib; and what very much 'maz'd me, they never make any Dumpling: But 'ſtead of Beef and Dumpling or Pudding, they eat Frogs like mad, and devour the Devil and all of Garlick and Onions: Our John is quite Heart-Sick of their Diet, and wants to be at Home again.

As for this Town of Paris it is very large, and has a Power of People, and all of them ſeem Gentlemen: Their very Coblers are complaiſant and know a great deal of good Breeding: They ſing love Songs in an agreeable Manner. I make a pretty Figure in my ſilver-button'd Cloaths, which I have kept very freſh, as our John can vouch: I wore it two Days ago at a Ball among People of the beſt Faſhion. They dance here extreamly well, yet I was confounded when I call'd for Moll Placket and old Roger o' Coverly, neither the Company nor the Fidlers know any Thing of the Matter.

This, Sir, with kind Love and ſervice to you, my Mother and Brother Bob, I deſire you would accept; and ſo no more at preſent from

Your Dutiful Son, 'till Death,

TIM. SHALLOW.

P. S. Our John ſends his Love to the Family, and deſires to be remember'd to Suky Sly the Wheelwright's Daughter.

London,

London, May 13. We hear, that the King is at preſent employ'd in a Negociation, the Succeſs of which will redound greatly to the Honour of this Nation in particular, and Service to the Liberties of Europe in general; and that it is ſolely to put a finiſhing Hand to this important Buſineſs that his Majeſty croſſes the Seas, in order to be nearer the Scene of Negociation. 'Tis believ'd, the Treaty on the Carpet is in Conſequence of the Project form'd ſome Months ago, for concluding a League between the Proteſtant Powers, not only to maintain the Cauſe of Religion, but likewiſe to ſerve as a Counterpoize, in caſe too good an Underſtanding ſhould grow between the Houſes of Auſtria and Bourbon, in Prejudice of the Proteſtant Intereſt, or the Ballance of Power in Europe.

May 21. They aſſure from Vienna, that the Emperor has no Deſign to have the Duke of Lorrain declar'd King of the Romans; that 'tis certain, the Court of Spain has made Overtures for obtaining the ſecond Archdutcheſs for Don Carlos, but that his Imperial Majeſty receiv'd them coolly; and that the Paſſports which he had ſent to Venice for the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, who is appointed to repair to Vienna, were not to be deliver'd to him till the Kings of Spain and Naples had put into his Imperial Majeſty's Hands the proper Acts for guarantying to him the Dutchies of Tuſcany, Parma, and Placentia, in like manner as his Imperial Majeſty has guaranty'd Naples and Sicily to Don Carlos.

May 28. The beginning of laſt Week died at Lymington in Hampſhire, Samuel Baldwin, Eſq; formerly of the Inner Temple, Barriſter at Law; he married Elizabeth, eldeſt Daughter of the late Lord Onſlow, Relict of Thomas Middleton of Stanſted Montfitchet in Eſſex, Eſq; (ſhe is ſtill living) and Siſter to the preſent Lord Onſlow, and to the Lady Williams, Wife of the Right Honourable Sir John Williams Knight Lord Mayor. By his Will he ordered his Corpſe to be buried in the Sea, amongſt the Rocks called the Needles at the Weſt end of the Iſle of Wight; which was accordingly preformed yeſterday was ſe'ennight, when the Body being put into a Leaden Coffin was conveyed in a large Boat to the Place appointed, attended by a Clergyman (for whom he had a great Veneration) to read the Funeral Service; but to the Surpriſe of a great Number of Spectators, when the Corpſe was put into the Sea, it would not ſink but ſwam, which occaſioned various Conjectures amongſt the Superſtitious; but being taken up again, and ſeveral Holes bored in the Coffin, to let in the Water, it ſunk. The Coffin being made full big, and filled up with Bran, 'tis thought occaſion'd its ſwimming.

May 29. The laſt Letters from Conſtantinople informs us, that the continual Succeſſes of the Perſian and Ruſſian Armies had thrown the Divan into the utmoſt Perplexity and Confuſion; that the grand Vizir, unable to ſtem the dreadful Torrent, had deſired to be diſmiſſed from his Employment, which it is added had already been conferred on another; that the Ruſſian Miniſter appeared no longer at Court, tho' it was well known he was ſtill in the City; and that the Troops in the Provinces were ordered to repair to the Frontiers, and new Levies carrying on thro' the whole Extent of that vaſt Empire.

Letters from Conſtantinople by the Way of Venice ſay, that Aſoph is not yet fallen into the Hands of the Ruſſians, but as they are already Maſters of almoſt all the Outworks, the Fate of the Town is inevitable.

The Eyes of all Europe ſeem to be turned towards Corſica and Rome as the Theatres of great Events. From the former they write, that the Malecontents are advanced into the Neighbourhood of Baſtia, tho' they have not yet actually block'd up the Place, that Papers have been found in the Town, threatening to give no Quarter to Man, Woman or Child, if the Inhabitants appeared in Arms againſt them; whereupon the Government had order'd the Arms of the Inhabitants to be removed into one Place, not to be taken out but in caſe of neceſſity. In the mean Time Lord Theodore and his Senate, have come to ſeveral new Regulations, with reſpect to the future Government of the Iſland, as that no Reſolution of State ſhall be taken by the Viceroy, without the Advice and Conſent of eight Senators, who ſhall be always about his Perſon, and have Apartments in his Palace; that all the Genoeſe ſhall be driven from the Iſland, never to be re-admitted, of what Condition or Quality ſoever they ſhall be; that a publick Univerſity ſhall be founded in one of the principal Cities, with ample Privileges; and to perpetuate the Honour and Glory of the Corſican Nation, an Order of Nobility ſhall be inſtituted, to be compoſed of the chief Families of the Country. The Animoſity is ſo great againſt the Genoeſe, that they have put to Death one Tavagna and his Nephew, only for owning they were deſcended from them; and ſix others have been ſent to Priſon for the ſame Crime.

From Rome we learn, the Spaniſh Fury ſeems to abate a little, and after all the Tragical Accounts of Oſtia being burn'd down to the Ground; the Truth is, that a ſmall Detachment of 80 Men from Velletri, enter'd the Town on a ſudden the 12th at Night, and plunder'd a few Houſes; carrying away with them the Stores in the Magazines, 500 Fuzils, and about ten Priſoners, who are ſaid to be Deſerters, that the Inhabitants of Oſtia had reſcued ſome time ago from the Spaniſh Officers. The next Day the ſame Detachment went to Portigliano, and from thence to St. Paul's three Fountains at a little Diſtance from Rome, where the News of their Approach, before their Number was certainly known, cauſed an inexpreſſible Conſternation; but Cardinal Acquaviva ſent an Order to the Commander to retire, which he inſtantly obey'd, marching to Caſtle Romano, a Fief belonging to Cardinal Alberoni, which they alſo plundered. On the 14th, Cardinal Barberini received an Expreſs from Ciſterna, that a Body of 1800 Spaniards was arrived at Piperno, and another Body advancing towards Rome raiſing Contributions in every Place they paſs thro'; and indeed this ſeems to be their only Deſign, eſpecially as it is given out that all theſe Troops have Orders to retire from the Eccleſiaſtical State upon the Pope's Payment of 40000 Crowns for the Expence his Catholick Majeſty has been put to.

His Imperial Majeſty has reſolved to have an Army in Hungary of 40000 Men under four Lieutenant Generals, and it is believed General Palfy will be commander in Chief; but that is not yet determined. In the mean time, all the abſent Officers are order'd to repair immediately to their Regiments. The Turks alarm'd at theſe Preparations, are putting all their Towns in Europe into a Poſture of Defence, particularly Widdin, which is the firſt Fortreſs they have upon the Frontiers of Hungary.

May 31. The Spaniards ſeem to have deferr'd for the preſent, their Thoughts of abandoning Tuſcany; and according to ſome private Letters, a very extraordinary Scene ſeems preparing to be play'd off in Corſica, the Emperor having, as 'tis pretended, undertaken to ſend a large Number of Troops thither on the Part of the Republick of Genoa; and his Catholick Majeſty, at leaſt the King of Naples, as large a Succour to King Theodore.

This extraordinary Perſonage, ſo celebrated in ſome of the Publick Papers for his conſummate Wiſdom, &c. is mention'd by our Letters as acting very imprudently, in the Rigour and Cruelty with which he puniſhes ſuch of the Inhabitants as fall into his Hands, and have exceeded the Time he limited for their making their Submiſſion to him, the Corſicans beginning already to take ſtrong Impreſſions no ways to his Advantage.

The Spaniards keep ſtill at ſome diſtance from Rome, and demand to have the Ringleaders of the late Tumult deliver'd to them; whilſt the Inhabitants of that City declare on their Part, that if a ſingle Perſon be touch'd, they will inſtantly riſe and do themſelves Juſtice.

His Holineſs in this Diſtreſs has ſent his own Nephew to the Court of Naples, to try to appeaſe the ſerene Infant.

Boſton, Auguſt 16. "In the Month of May laſt we inſerted an Account given by Mr. Mitchel, of Annapolis Royal in Nova Scotia, a Deputy Surveyor of His Majeſty's Woods under the Hon. Col Dunbar, of his meeting on his Survey with Mrs. Buckler, at the Harbour of Pobomcoumps, on the 1ſt of that Month, who informed him (in ſubſtance) That in October laſt her Husband Mr. Andrew Buckler, and ſhe left Dublin, in a Brigantine whereof he was Owner, bound for Annapolis in Maryland; and having a long Paſſage had almoſt expended their Freſh Water, which obliged them to make Land, and arriv'd at Tiboge to the Northward of Tuscat Iſlands, on the 16th of December following, then ſent their Boat on ſhoar for Water, but could get none, and were oblig'd to melt Snow and Barrel it up. That they ſent a Maid and Negro Boy on ſhoar to waſh their Linnen, who never return'd, therefore concluded they were kill'd by the Indians, and robb'd of their Boat, for want whereof the Ships Company were confin'd to the Ship for two Months, and had no freſh Water but what they ſav'd when it Rain'd. That many of the Sailors ors were forced to mix Rum and Limejuce with Salt Water to drink, which occasion'd the Death of most of the Ships Company, being 18 in Number, the Master dying first on the 30th of March; that on the 4th of April she was surprized by the Indians who plundered the Brigt. and carried her off by Force, and kept her in the Woods four Days, carrying her from Place to Place, till they came to their Wigwams, from whence she was taken by the French to their Houses, and from thence by Mr. Mitchel to Annapolis Royal, where she was receiv'd and entertain'd by the Hon. Col. Armstrong, Lieut Governor of Nova Scotia, in a generous manner for a considerable time, while her Affairs with the Indians were under the Consideration of that Government, and afterwards was at the Expence of sending her to Boston, and from Boston to London; and she is now on her Passage with Capt. Bennet.

She had not left this Place many Days before Advice came hither from Barbadoes, well attested, That this pretended Mrs. Buckler was a vile Impostor, for that Mr. Andrew Buckler was of the Island of Barbadoes, has a Wife now living there, and sail'd from thence in the Brigantine Baltimore, with a Cargo of Rum to Dublin, and was there in the Months of July and August, and agreed with the Agents or Managers of the City of Dublin to carry off 40 Felons, then in Newgate under the Rule for Transportation, to Annapolis in America, which he took on board in September, besides several Indented Servants, and sail'd from thence no Person on board pretending to be his Wife. The Account given by Mr. Mitchel in the Publick Prints reaching Barbadoes, and that a Woman on board went by the Name of Mr. Buckler's Wife, it was conjectur'd with good grounds, that she was one of the Convicts on Board, that went by the Name of Miss Mathews, who had receiv'd Sentence of Death for Theft, and was reputed a Common Strumpet in Dublin, and always of ill repute, and personated Mr. Buckler's Widow in order to possess herself of the Brigantine and Effects, and to defraud Mrs Mary Buckler in Bridge-Town, the Deceased's real Widow, of his Estate.

Mrs. Buckler of Barbadoes, writes to a Gentleman here, that she believes this Woman is one of the Forty Transports her Husband had on board, and that she with others when they came near the Land murder'd her Husband, with the rest of the Vessels Company, and ran her into a bie Place where the Indians inhabit, to plunder her. Had this Advice come before Capt. Bennet had sail'd, it would have effectually put a stop to this wretched Woman's Voyage. The Servant Maid and Negro Boy mention'd in the first Relation were found Dead on shoar, and the Negroe's Throat cut from Ear to Ear, by some of the barbarous Crew. It's thought that the Convicts after having cut off the Master and Sailors, went on shoar and dispersed among the French and Indians This perfidious Woman pretended to have Buried Mr. Buckler her Husband (as she call'd him) on shoar, but on diligent search made for the Place it could not be found: Which with many other Circumstances, particularly finding Blood spilt and dried between Decks, gave no small room to suspect what now turns out, that Murder had been committed on board that Vessel.

Philadelphia, August 30. Extract of a Letter From on Board the Sloop Charming Betty, in St. Augustine Harbour, July the 25th 1736. per Capt. Kipp, via New-York.

I Should have been in Boston by this time, but this Governor hath embargo'd all Carolina Vessels, but for what Reason we know not, nor cannot learn. This is the 17th Day Capt. Parsons and my self have been stopt, and how many Days longer we know not. We learn ashore that they are to have a Supply of 1000 Soldiers, 100 of them arrived last Week and the rest are daily expected, which gives us Room to think they have a Design upon Georgia, they having stopt Mr Oglethorp's Ambassador, and will not suffer any Letter to pass or repass. This Sloop is permitted to sail, they supplying their Garrison with Provisions yearly. Here is 4 Sail detained.
